A Solidarity Event for forcibly displaced persons and their host communities in Central America and Mexico, was held on June 10, in San José, Costa Rica, on the side lines of the 30th anniversary of the Central American Integration System (SICA). High-level representatives from twelve States, the European Union, financial institutions, United Nations agencies, regional organizations, the private sector, and civil society participated in the Event. The event was organized by the Government of Spain in its capacity as the Pro-Tempore Presidency of the Support Platform of the Comprehensive Regional Framework for Protection and Solutions (MIRPS) in collaboration with the Pro-Tempore Presidency of Guatemala of the MIRPS and Costa Rica, in its capacity Pro-Tempore Presidency of the Central American Integration System (SICA), with the support of UNHCR and the OAS, in their capacity as Technical Secretariat of the MIRPS.

During the event, participants highlighted that forced displacement in Central America and Mexico is the result of multiple factors that are interconnected, including the lack of economic opportunities and high rates of crime and violence. In addition, they noted that the COVID-19 pandemic and natural disasters have created additional difficulties and increased the vulnerability of the displaced population and the risk of displacement. Countries in the region spoke about the devastating effects of climate change on the region.

It was also highlighted that the regional response to forced displacement must incorporate a humanitarian and development dimension, including both immediate action and long-term planning, to promote progress in social inclusion, prosperity, and the reduction of violence to reduce high levels of human mobility and mitigate the humanitarian consequences. In this regard, the MIRPS is seen as an effective framework to promote a coordinated regional response to forced displacement, which brings together all relevant actors and promotes initiatives from the humanitarian and development sectors, as well as the public and private sectors. At the global level, the MIRPS and its Support Platform are a good model for other regions and a concrete example of shared responsibility envisaged in the Global Compact on Refugees.

During the Solidarity Event, new financial commitments totalling USD 110 million were announced by the European Union (22.5 million), Ireland (5M), Spain (7.6M), Switzerland (2.5M) and the United States (57 M), as well as the private sector and foundations. Canada also reaffirmed its commitment to assume the next Presidency of the Support Platform and to give continuity to the cooperation process between the MIRPS countries and the international community.
